Additional comments

*Hourly respite Visit- This means requiring a carer to check in on the client an our at various times a day or once a day depending on the frequency of service needed.

*Client meals – Carers can prepare meals for the client they are looking after. Should additional family members, or guests, wish to also have food prepared, this will have to be discussed with the carer in advance.

*Cut short assignments – If an assignment is cut short for any reason, we require a 5 days notice. if the service is cut short for any reason other than because the service received is unsatisfactory, then we are entitled to charge for seven days of the assignment.

*Work and rest time – Though live-in care is unmeasured work, the daily average should be a maximum of 10 hour of care, plus a 2-hour break at a convenient time for the client(s). Should care be required during this period, then additional support should be arranged to allow the carer to take an appropriate break.
